DEANS DEMAND COOPERATION OF DRAMATIC CIRCLE

Faculty Advisor Must Exercise
More Authority Over Organization

STROLLER PRESIDENT
DENIES FALSE RUMOR

Group Intends To Function
As In Past, Fahey Asserts
In Statement

More authority must be exercised by the faculty advisor of Strollers, in order for the dramatic organization to function under the approval of Deans Sarah Blanding and T. T. Jones, was the decision reached at a meeting of the Stroller officers and the deans on October 18, in Miss Blanding's office.

"The Strollers have been instructed to map out their plans for this year and present them for approval to the deans of the University. If the Strollers are to continue to go on as in the past, they must have a competent faculty advisor. The deans are willing to back the Strollers, if they are willing to cooperate with the deans and put forth the proper effort," said Dean Blanding to a Kernel reporter yesterday.

In an interview with James Fahey, president of Strollers, who took over the office recently after the resignation of H. S. Hollingsworth, Fahey expressed the intention of coming to terms with the deans in behalf of Strollers, and that he had no intention of disbanding the organization. "I feel sure from my discussion with Dean Jones that a plan satisfactory to both organization and administrative officials of the University can be worked out that will allow a continuation of the organization as an undergraduate dramatic circle," was the new president's statement. When he was asked if the Dramatic circle had any idea of disbanding, his reply was:

"Any rumor to the fact that the Strollers are considering the breaking up of that organization is absolutely false, and out of the question. Strollers have never entertained such an idea, since I have been in the organization. The organization intends to continue as in the past, with a wider scope of activities; we also intend to make this year's productions the best in its history."

ALUMNUS WINS '32 NOBEL PRIZE

Thomas Hunt Morgan, Class
Of 1886, Receives Honor
For Research Work
In Medicine

AWARD WORTH $46,000

One of the highest honors ever to be given a graduate of the University was the awarding of the 1932 Nobel prize for medicine to Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, internationally known zoologist of Pasadena, California. The award was made in recognition of his discoveries concerning the eugenic functions of chromosomes.

Born in a house on the northwest corner of Mill and Second streets in Lexington, known as the Gen. John Hunt Morgan home, in 1866, Doctor Morgan attended the University, and was graduated in the class of 1886. He returned in 1890 to receive an honorary doctor's degree.

Announcement of the award came on the eve of the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite, and originator of the prize. No exact cash value of the prize has yet been released, but it is expected to be at least $46,350, the value of the prize in 1930.

After leaving the University in 1886, Doctor Morgan began a long teaching career at Bryn Mawr and Columbia university, which terminated when he became director of the William C. Kerchoff laboratories of biological sciences at the California Institute of Technology in 1928. He received his masters and doctors degrees from Johns Hopkins university.

Doctor Morgan has established a reputation which extends over two continents. Some of his special researches have been upon chromosomes and genes, during which experiments he has come close to the secret of life itself. A few of his (Continued on Page Four)

W. & L. GENERALS WIN OVER 'CATS BY 7-0 COUNT

Big Blue Is Conspicuous by Lack of Coordinate Play
And Blocking

W. & L. MAKES 94 YARD
DRIVE FOR ONLY SCORE

Better Form Is Expected for Annual Duke Battle Next Saturday

By JAY LUCIAN

Number 13 proved to be unlucky in actuality for the Wildcats, leaders of the 13 teams in the South-eastern conference, as they lost a 7 to 0 decision, Saturday afternoon to the Washington and Lee Generals in the 13th football contest between the two schools.

A much lighter team, the Generals rushed the sluggish, lacking luster Wildcats from the beginning of the fray and played at top speed throughout the contest, scoring one touchdown and successfully repulsing the attempts of the Kentuckians when they did come to life.

Kentucky was woefully conspicuous by its lack of coordinate play and blocking. Perhaps it was the effect of three hard games in a row, for they appeared to be an entirely different team from the one that took the field and wrested victory from the powerful team of Georgia Tech two weeks ago.

Although the Wildcats gained more first downs, the game was fairly even throughout, except in the third quarter when the Generals, led by Seaton and Sawyer, drove 94 yards for a touchdown. They almost scored again in the second half when an attempted field goal failed by inches. The successful touchdown play was a shovel pass from Seaton to Sawyer who carried it around end.

The fighting Washington and Lee team was held for downs several times close to the Big Blue goal line. Kercheval again was outstanding for his punting and defensive play. Kentucky's most consistent ground gainer was Pritchard who carried the ball nine times for an average of five yards on each run. Rupert, Jones, and Jobe looked good in the line.

Over-confidence evidently was one of the causes that brought about the Kentucky defeat. Last year's game with Washington and Lee was the fourth straight victory for Kentucky and ended to the tune of 54 to 7. This year's Generals are a vastly improved team. They tied the powerful West Virginia team and were beaten by Yale by only two touchdowns, one of which came as the result of a blocked punt.

The first defeat of the season for the 'Cats will place them in a fighting mood for the Duke game next Saturday and a complete reversal of form is expected to take place.

GLORIFIED FAITH

As the Thanksgiving season approaches and our thoughts turn again to the Pilgrim fathers and the pioneer days of our country, we are more than mindful, in this, the fourth year of the depression, of that priceless heritage which the American people have received from the forefathers of our country. That heritage is the courage of a glorified faith.

Courage is defined as that firmness of spirit and swell of soul which meets danger and the unknown without fear. It is both moral and physical.

Consider then the courage of the American people. Those brave pilgrims who came here to settle New England for religious freedom and those intrepid souls who embarked upon unknown waters to land in Virginia had courage. Those who took the necessary steps, later, which made the 13 colonies into a nation, had courage. They, who crossed the country from east to west, advancing with the frontier, had courage. And in between times, those unspectacular and humdrum souls who have built the nation from day to day, also had courage. They all have had the courage of a glorified faith that our nation would endure.

It is no wonder, then, that the American nation with such a heritage should be going forward still, with no less faith and courage than those who have led America thus far in its progress.

Never before, on the face of the globe, has there been a country with such riches as has the United States of America. Never has there been a people so endowed with natural resources, nor a people which possessed such unlimited fields of opportunity as these American people.

Now, much of this has been taken away. Often it has been taken away through no fault of their own. There has come a reversal of fortune to the country at large. But there has been no backward glance, except in retrospect. The American people, sustained by its courage and faith, faces bravely the future.

We are not like any other country. Asia, India, and China have also millions living in poverty. But they have never known the comforts and the luxuries to which the American is much worse to have had and lost than never to have had at all. Anarchy, revolution, and pestilence have found the other countries as fertile fields. But they have made small headway in America.

The man in the street, the laborer without a job, the merchant who is a bankrupt look courageously toward the future. Confronted with losses, despair, and defeat they look toward tomorrow with hope. That is courage and a glorified faith.

And on the summed-up courage of such individuals does the nation as a whole receive its courage to go forward.

A SIGNAL HONOR

For the first time in the history of the institution, a Nobel prize award has been presented to a graduate of the University. Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, a native of Lexington, and who was graduated from the University in 1886, has received this great scientific honor. Doctor Morgan was awarded the Nobel prize for research in the field of genetics.

After his graduation from the University, Doctor Morgan received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the Johns Hopkins University. He has also been given honorary degrees from McGill, California, Edinburgh, Michigan and the University of Kentucky.

"Doctor Morgan's discoveries in the field of heredity constitute the greatest of the discoveries made this century in biology," according to Prof. W. S. Anderson, professor of genetics at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University, Saturday telegraphed congratulations to Doctor Morgan, who now resides in Pasadena, California. He said, "The University of Kentucky extends congratulations to its distinguished alumnus upon whom has been conferred a most signal honor, the Nobel prize. The University is honored by your great services as a scientist, philosopher and gentleman. May you have many happy years." The Alumni association also wired a congratulatory message to the distinguished graduate.

In addition to his outstanding work in the field of science, Doctor Morgan is a direct descendant of one of the South's oldest and most colorful families. His father, Captain Charlton Morgan, was a brother of the Confederate cavalry leader, Gen. John Hunt Morgan, and served with him during the War Between the States. His mother, Mrs. Ellen Key Howard Morgan, was a grand-daughter of Francis Scott Key, who wrote the "Star Spangled Banner."

Every graduate and student of the University should feel proud of Doctor Morgan for the fact that an international award was conferred upon him. A true Southern gentleman and a native of Lexington, whose brilliant mind has carried him to the heights in a field of intricate study and research, deserves no little praise and commendation. Descended from a line of Southerners, noted for their chivalry, honor and patriotism, he inherited the blood that made the South outstanding for its contributions to literature, art and the sciences.

The Kernel, on behalf of the student body of the University, adds its heartiest congratulations to those already extended to Doctor Morgan. We are indeed proud that such an honor should be given to a graduate of our University. Doctor Morgan, we wish you much success in your studies and research and many, carefree happy years, filled with a bountiful measure of success in all things.

A GRAVE SITUATION

The withdrawal of Germany from participation in the Disarmament conference and also from the League of Nations creates a grave situation not only for Europe, but also in the entire world. This was a step many had expected, but hoped would not take place. However, since it is here it deserves the serious consideration of all thinking people.

That Germany has been oppressed since the end of the World War is absolutely true. The Treaty of Versailles imposed conditions which were quite impossible of fulfillment. The burden of reparations was the cause of more difficulties and the forced admission of war guilt played a part of the greatest importance in the trouble which has now come to a head. The German people are a proud people and this burden made them resentful toward the rest of the world. For the conditions that exist today the Allies in general, and France in particular, must face the fact that they are largely responsible. But with all these admissions and facts, are the actions of the Hitler government, since its inception, justified?

To that question it is hard to answer "yes." The acts of Hitler in the past several months can hardly be justified on any grounds. His persecution of the Jews has been unreasonable, unfair, and even murderous to a great race. The stopping of all public opinion through complete censorship and control of the press and radio is not desirable to say the least. It has been found in the past that men who are sincere in their dealings with the people do not attempt to muzzle the press and choke other means of public expression. But as has been said the very conditions that have been described are due in a large part to the unjust treatment received by Germany at the hands of the former Allied Powers.

Much talk has been heard lately, in reference to the German situation, about the failure of the League of Nations. It is well to keep in mind that Germany cannot withdraw from the League for two years. It is well also to remember that nineteen years ago last August, in 1914, Germany did not give the world any notice of its position or intentions, but simply marched her forces into foreign territory. The present situation, all will agree, is certainly something of an improvement over what existed in 1914. At least we now attempt to stop war and, however feeble our efforts may be, they do help.

This generation has laid a foundation upon which permanent peace will be the result.

PITKIN CLUB

The Pitkin club was organized at the University of Kentucky in 1925 by certain members of the Maxwell Street Presbyterian church who saw an opportunity for doing some constructive work of a religious nature among the Presbyterian men and women as well as the young people of other denominations who attended the University.

The idea of having a Pitkin club on this campus came through Doctor States, professor of Physics at the University, and a member of Maxwell street church. Doctor States was a member of the first Pitkin club which was organized on the campus of the University of Pittsburgh. The original name of the club is in honor of Horace Tracy Pitkin, missionary to China, who was killed in the Boxer Rebellion. The first club had as its purpose missionary work.

Doctor States, Prof. J. Morton Davis, Prof. W. S. Webb with the cooperation of George Kavanaugh, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., organized the University of Kentucky Pitkin club limiting the membership to 25 members.

The club, which meets at noon each Wednesday at Maxwell Street Presbyterian church, is financed through the synod of the Presbyterian church, and through contributions made by the Maxwell street church, and friends. The luncheon is prepared, and served by some of the women of the church.

The members are students interested in discussing moral and religious problems. The club now limits its membership to 75. The first leader of the club was Dr. A. W. Fortune, pastor of the Central Christian church, and he was the leader for four years.

Other leaders of the club have been Dr. Jesse H. Homan, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church; Dr. Howard Morgan, the former pastor of Maxwell Street Presbyterian church. Rev. George Heaton, pastor of the Felix Memorial Baptist church, has been re-elected as the leader of the club again this year.

The members of Pitkin club plan to incorporate, and give their annual Christmas tree party to the children of Irish town, at Lincoln school.

BAD NEWS, BUT A TIMELY WARNING

Fellow students, we have come to the place where it is necessary to broach a subject which does not follow a particularly happy strain, and which subject many of you will attempt to avoid as long as possible.

What are we raving about? Why, mid-semester exams of course! Wait a minute now, don't stop reading yet! We are perfectly aware of the fact that most of you will say, "Exams! Why bring that up any way?" And in answer we say, "We are not the ones who are bringing them up. We're just trying to play the Good Samaritan, or something, and give you fair warning before they suddenly floor you while your back is turned."

To our friends, the freshmen, (of which species there seems to be a considerable number, since being able to distinguish them by the blue cap) this epistle is especially addressed.

Impossible, though it may seem, time has slipped away so rapidly that this first big bugaboo is literally upon you. We don't wish to dish out a lot of nonsense and try to make these exams appear to be something terrible, but all kidding aside, if the books have been gathering cobwebs, it's high time to get them out and dust the pages a little.

Of course, to those who have been doing a little digging all along, as well as some "apple-polishing" on the side, this article does not pertain. But for the rank and file, now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of—not their country, state or institution, but themselves.

Especially to the first year students these exams are of fundamental importance, for on them to a large extent hinges your scholastic success or failure in college. It is a big jump from high school to college and this is the first test on what you have been trying to learn under this new regime. These exams certainly are nothing to be feared, but they are something to be met face to face, and with your best foot forward.

We wouldn't think of suggesting that the profs grade these first tests very carefully in order to get a line on their students and that future tests are unceremoniously dumped in the waste basket, but nevertheless these tests probably do mean more than all those that follow.

Make a good standing in your first year in college and the rest of the way will be much easier, and this is the place where you make that first step towards a good standing. If you do well, everything is "hotsy tosy"; if you do otherwise, it means bigger and better "book-cracking." These tests will serve not only for the prof to get a slant on your capabilities, but also for you to line yourself up. So, get busy and do your damndest now, and if the future is not a bed of roses at least it will be very much simplified.

Jest Among Us

These freshmen who think that they are deceiving us by not wearing their tell-tale little blue caps, should remember that the foolishly vacant look, which only they can assume, is a dead give-away anyhow.

Gussie says, "Change is good for anyone, if it doesn't happen to be short-change."

The jilted lover should find some consolation in knowing that, at least, some other sap would now have to eat the ex-girl-friend's soggy biscuits and burnt pie crust.

And then there was the freshman who ran all the way up the three flights of stairs in McVey hall to the soda fountain, upon receiving a notice to report to the University dispensary at once.

"Goodness snakes alive!" gasped the co-ed, as Doctor Funkhouser pulled the reptiles from the folds of his shirt.

What with the lawyers carrying canes and the engineers wearing derbies, the University is commencing to resemble a cross between a hospital and an undertaking establishment.

"Dictionaries are most helpful in obtaining a higher education," said the tiny freshette, as she placed the thickened volume on her chair.

Opera Singer Is Interviewed

U. K. Student Takes Advantage of Opportunity to Converse with Lawrence Tibbett

By HARRISON ELLIOTT

For weeks I had waited for the day to arrive when the great Lawrence Tibbett would give a concert program in Asheville. For days I had wondered just how he would appear, how he would talk, and now I found myself en route to the Manor hotel where the maestro was staying. I shivered, cursed the cold interior of the taxi, and finally arrived at the conclusion that maybe the chill of early spring air in a taxi was not the sole cause for my trembling. Nervous? Yes. But who wouldn't be if he were soon to talk to and with one of the most illustrious musicians living?

Hours seemed to fly by as I waited for an answer to my knock at the door of the singer's parlor. What would he be like? Then the door flew wide and Tibbett stood before me in loose artist's suit, a broad smile lighting his countenance, a hand extended. In I went awaiting the ordeal. Soon I was comfortable. Tibbett makes one feel that way. His wild gesticulations accompanied his speeches. I caught myself making gestures like his and felt my face turn crimson. Tibbett's manners are catchy.

Well, I hung my knees over a chair arm and Tibbett gesticulated wildly in answer to my questions, and we talked over everything from music to jazz, from art to cartoons, from singing to crooning. I shall never forget that hour in the presence of the great American champion of opera for America.

He is a very pleasant and considerate conversationalist. As we talked I gathered facts about Tibbett as man and musician. I find that he heard his first lullaby in Bakersfield, a small oil town in California. In the seventh year of his life he was taken to Los Angeles, where he received his education. In high school he was active in glee club and theatricals. After graduation he went upon a brief tour of Shakespearean performances, and sang with light-opera organizations, the membership of which consisted of local talent.

During the war Tibbett served as an instructor in seamanship on a naval training vessel which cruised up and down the California Coast.

After the war he married, and proceeded to earn a livelihood via the music profession. He sang with the California Light Opera Co., in which company he acquired his intense admiration for Gilbert and Sullivan works. He also tried the concert stage, and gave recitals as far north as Oregon. Then Rupert Hughes advised him to go directly to New York, rather than to "first study in Europe and thence back to New York." Thus our All-American songster found himself in Uncle Sam's Metropolis.

Success for this great baritone came early in Metropolitan opera. For at the age of 26 his "Ford" in Boito's "Falstaff" won such an ovation that the act was stopped for many minutes while an enthusiastic audience thundered its approval to the superior art of this young American singer.

Tibbett loves opera passionately. His favorite opera is "Die Meistersinger." He contends that opera is not for the few but for all, and that if opera is to continue it must reach everyone. He says that the American people must have opera produced in the English language, on American themes, and presented in the modern school of acting.

"Opera must be seen, and heard—and understood, else it has failed in its mission," he asserted with firm conviction. He considers the movies to be a vital factor in the future life of opera.

He often feels that the stars of the Metropolitan, including himself, are working more for personal glorification than for the cohesive spirit in presentation of the operas performed. He also believes that more attention should be given to the physical build of the stars in reference to the roles they are to enact. The star must fit the role.

Lighter works, such as operettas, have great appeal for Tibbett, but his public demands his art in grand opera, and in grand opera he must continue. He did, however, win huge acclaim in his movie roles.

Tibbett declares dancing to be very important and places American popular music highest in the scale.

When asked his advice to young and ambitious singers, Tibbett said, "If you love music, stay with it. It will stay with you. But if you seek only glamour, sell real estate, or take up plumbing."

The vitality of this singer is very apparent, as one may gather from his own words, "I love to speed in a car. It is one way of self-expression." The power and force of the man are evident in another of his statements, simple but dynamic, "I do not like anything where there is nothing left for me to do."

Is it a wondering matter that Tibbett has succeeded?

Alluringly sweet as the smell of rose
Which beckons me to the garden again.

A shadow silhouette in nude repose
Held back the curtain—invited me in.
The cool dark recesses of the spaces Unknown, breathed of an air of fantasy

Which whispered in dreams of haunted places.
In peace to lie with a mate of mystery.

Captivated by a promised caress,
I stretched forth a hand to touch loveliness,
Thrilling to the feel as a budding
god

My soul prepared to mate, without its clod—
But alluring is the smell of flowers,
And happy are dew drops in morn-

I tread unfamiliar paths, alone.
I wander and wander farther away.
People, places, and thoughts pass

I please no God; I have no land, no home.
I just travel—travel down the road
of life.
Always, a little nearer—somewhere.

Once I sat beneath these trees

Alas, but now I am old, and now I

But there will be a day when I

There will be a warming breeze,
And I will sit again beneath these trees.

Roamin' the Rialto

By BEN BLACK

Colonel Mae West, who has more curves than any three of the present crop of Kentucky Colonels, opened a week's engagement Sunday at the Ben Ali theater in her latest picture, "I'm No Angel"; and, judging from the size of the crowds, a good part of the population has decided to "go West."

"I'm No Angel" shows the rise of Tira, the lion-tamer, from a carnival to a penthouse. Of course Tira doesn't lack for men in her life; and she has her share of affairs. Probably the most amusing scene in the whole picture is where Tira conducts her own heart balm suit against that "tall, dark and handsome" Cary Grant who again accepts the immortal invitation to come up sometime.

The story and dialogue of this picture were written by Miss West herself; and the picture was directed by Wesley Ruggles.

The present attraction at the Kentuckian is Maurice Chevalier in "The Way to Love," which isn't at all a bad picture, and which should rank rather high as entertainment. It is the same carefree, gay, smiling, rollicking, singing Chevalier of his other pictures, but that doesn't detract in any way from the merit of the show. Edward Everett Horton, as usual, is a scream; and Ann Dvorak, playing her first role opposite Chevalier, is an enchanting sweetheart for the "playboy."

Today "Heroes For Sale" ends its run at the Strand. This picture, which features Richard Barthelmess, is the most serious of all of the current pictures. In fact it is a little too heavy; if anything. The trials and ordeals, which Barthelmess, as an ex-soldier out of work, goes thru are really pretty terrible.

I keep coming back to that word "balanced" on the back of the Chesterfield package

YOU often hear the word balance — something is out of balance — top-heavy, not on an "even keel."

What you read, "Chesterfield Cigarettes are a balanced blend," means that the right amounts of the right kinds of tobacco are welded together; that is, home-grown tobaccos, the right kind, the right quantity — are blended and cross-blended with tobaccos from Turkey and Greece.

When these tobaccos are balanced one against the other, then you have a mild cigarette.

When they are in balance, then you have a better-tasting cigarette.

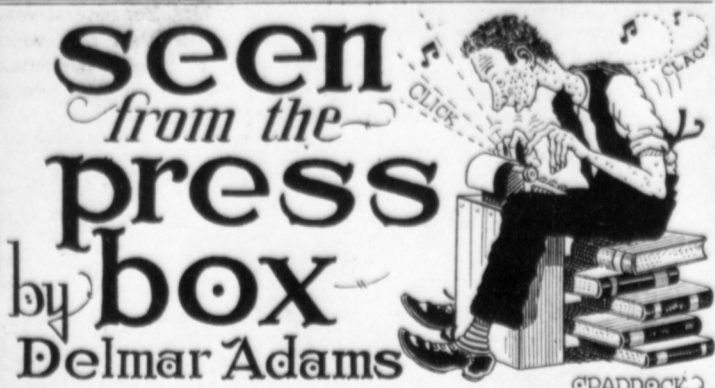

May we ask you to read again the statement on the back of the Chesterfield package?
May we ask you to try Chesterfield?

Having realized that the readers of this paper have become tired of my line of hokey, I have asked a most talented gentleman to write this column today. J. B. Wells, who has shown his fitness as a sports writer, is undertaking for the first time the duties of a columnist. Now J. #### By JOHN BRITTON WELLS

Taking my seat in the proverbial pressbox for the first time, we believe that the Wildcats are a very temperamental football team. As the old saying goes, "When they're up they're up, and when they're down they're down." When the Big Blue met the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets we witnessed in our opinion the greatest football game ever played on Stoll field; we decided that the end of the season would see Kentucky undefeated and ready for that long-awaited trip to the Rose Bowl, but since that time the same team for which our fond hopes soared so high has been in one of its temperamental moods.

In their first showing of the year the Kittens showed that Coach Pribble has not been loafing on the job, and that those high school stars of which we have been hearing so much are really all that they are "cracked up to be." The most outstanding ball carrier of the day was "Old Train," Bert Johnson of Ashland High school fame. The most outstanding play of the game, however, came when Frank Walker leaped into the air and took a pass out of the hands of an opposing halfback who had the ball in his hands at the time.

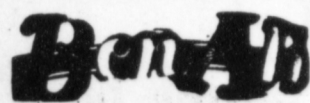

Little has been said about the way the game came out at Roanoke Saturday, but the 'Cats expect to have something to say after the battle with Wallace Wade's Duke aggregation here Saturday. It may be that the bold threat that "A Kentucky team will never beat me" made by Wade several years ago will be proved erroneous, if the Big Blue recuperates from that moodiness which has pervaded for the past two weeks. Of the twelve games with "Wade-built" teams Kentucky has lost every one, and by the law of averages it is getting high time that the Wildcats came through with a victory.

JOHNSON LEADS KITTENS TO 19-6 WIN

By NORMAN GARLING
Led by Johnson, Kouns and Farris, all former Ashland aces, the University of Kentucky Kittens avenged themselves last Saturday when they defeated the Vanderbilt Rats by a one-sided score of 19 to 6.

Johnson made the score decisive in the last quarter when, with the beautiful blocking of Kouns, he ran 44 yards around left end for a touchdown.

Vanderbilt kicked off to Kouns, who received the ball on his own 10-yard line and ran it back to the Rat's 33-yard line. Johnson brought the ball to Vanderbilt's 11-yard line in five attempts. The Kittens were penalized 25 yards, but on the next play Johnson took the ball to Vanderbilt's 2-yard line. Farris crashed through the center of the line for a touchdown, and Kouns' place-kick for the extra point was good.

Kentucky kicked off to Vanderbilt and Peebles brought it back to his own 40-yard line. The Kittens were penalized for offside. Truit lost 20 yards on an attempted end run. Vanderbilt punted to Kentucky's 40-yard line. Farris smashed through tackle for two yards, and on the next play he took the ball around right end for 20 yards. Johnson made three yards through left tackle, and Farris made a yard through center. Vanderbilt punted on first down; Johnson took the ball on Vanderbilt's 40-yard line and returned it 15-yards. Walker gained 15 yards around left end as the quarter ended.

Kouns' pass to Farris was incomplete. Kouns again passed and it was intercepted by Plasman, who ran it back 20-yards. On the next play Brown passed to Plasman for a touchdown, but the try for extra point was blocked. The remainder of the quarter was taken up with an exchange of punts.

Vanderbilt kicked off to Kentucky and the Kittens started a march down the field that did not stop until they had crossed the goal line for their second touchdown. Kouns' try for the extra point was low.

Vanderbilt's attempts at the line were of no avail and they punted to Greenville, who returned it 15 yards. The Kittens started another march down the field with Johnson made 10 yards through center, followed by Farris who made 5 yards through the same hole. Johnson passed and it was intercepted by Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt punted to their own 45-yard line. Johnson made 15 yards through left tackle, and followed this with a spectacular 44-yard run around left end, while Kouns paved the way with perfect blocking. Johnson's kick for the extra point failed.

Psychology Profs' Papers Published

The current issue of Psychological Abstracts contains references to three members of the Kentucky department. Dr. Henry Beaumont reviews Dr. C. Buehler's "Human Life As a Psychological Problem," which is printed in German and which he is engaged in translating, and Dr. M. Lazansfeld's "The Unemployment of Marionthal," a study of the effects of prolonged unemployment by members of the psychology department of the University of Vienna, Austria.

Dr. Martin M. White's paper on "The Influence of an Interpolated Electric Shock upon Recall," which was published in the Journal of Experimental Psychology, and Dr. J. B. Miner's paper on "Laboratory Work in a First Course in Psychology," published in the Kentucky Personnel bulletin, also are abstracted. Doctor Miner also has a paper in the current number of the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology, "The Psycho-Medical Correction of the Drug Habit." At the recent annual meetings of the American Psychological association in Chicago, Dr. Graham B. Dimmick was on the program for a paper reporting "An Application of the Rorschach Test to Three Clinical Types of Dementia Praecox." Doctor Miner reported "An Example of Selection of Policemen and Firemen," and also acted as chairman of the one of the sections on clinical psychology.

Scandal Snickerings

By CAMERON COFFMAN

There isn't much to tell...that is, we have not learned much....

...we toured off to Roanoke with the expectation of picking up a few choice morsels...but as far as we know, nothing much happened besides the football game that we had the misfortune to lose...Phidelt Red Davis was sent to Virginia to lead cheers for the Wildcat fans...all he needed for a cheering section was some Wildcat fans...so Red was assigned to the "chain gang"...he chased the ten-yard chain up and down the field all afternoon...Lambdaky Ralph Salyers and Sartor Stewart were seen several times...Kappas Ann Payne Perry and Mary Ford Offutt journeyed to the Virginia city to witness the Kentucky team in action and visit their "Alma Mammy"...Hollins College...Kappas Carolyn Quigley and Georgia Turnipseed were seen lounging about the lobby of the Patrick Henry Hotel...Oh yes, 'tis rumored that Carolyn has a "beau lover"...his name is Bailey...Jack is the first name...Good football player, too...Deltaw O. B. Coffman and SPE John St. John came in as the game started...Tridelt Scotty Chambers was very anxious to make the trip...What's his name, Scotty? Kadee pleb, Sarah Kinney also expressed her desire to go to the game.

Co-Educational, Huh?

One of the downtown papers carried a news item on the campus election in which it said that Ann Jones, a member of Delta Tau Delta was elected as vice-president.

Whattaman Goodson

Several days ago someone intercepted a note from Tridelt Marjorie Fieber's geology paper...It was addressed to Prof. Robinson...It reads thus:

Mr. Robinson, please don't let Joe G. come in here when I'm taking a quiz because he makes me in such a twit, I can't remember anything.

Kay Joe Goodson does have technique with the feminine sex...How do you do it, Joe?

Go West, Young Man, Go West!

We just saw an account in the paper where Gov. Ruby Laffoon has added Mae West to his evergrowing list of Kentucky Colonels...The Governor received a telegram of thanks from "The West"...She told his governorship to "Come up and see her most anytime."

While visiting in Lewisburg, W. Va., last week-end we saw Harris Rhoads, former kay pleb, and freshman football player of last year, who is attending a military school at that town...he sends his regards to all of his friends.

A Break for You, Freshman Etties! The benefit tag dag, the proceeds of which will go to the Student Union building fund, will enable the fair ones to get the campus big shots to put their autograph on their "Beat Duke" tag...the sum is a meager five cents...No introduction is needed...Just step right up...and ask Gordon "Babe" Burns, George Vogel, Wes Carter, Dutch Kreuter, or Ralph Kercheval, or any of the other campus celebrities...They'll be glad to sign one for you.
